After Comcast: What Now for Net Neutrality?

Tuesday, June 1, 2010, 9:30 AM - 11:00 AM

What's next for net neutrality? Just weeks after the DC Circuit's ruling in Comcast v. FCC, on May 6th, the agency announced plans to expand its regulatory power over the Internet. While presented as a compromise or "third way" approach, the proposal has drawn criticism and raised questions about how far the FCC can go. Whatever course policymakers take could have huge implications for the Internet. A panel of experts will discuss options and offer their assessment of the best way forward. Featured speakers include:

Moderator: Robert Atkinson, President, The Information & Technology Foundation

Panelists:

- Richard Bennett, Research Fellow, Information Technology & Innovation Foundation
- James Cicconi, Senior Executive Vice President, External and Legislative Affairs, AT&T
- Eric Klinker, Chief Executive Officer, BitTorrent
- Randolph May, President, Free State Foundation
- James Speta, Professor, Northwestern University School of Law
- Steven Teplitz, Senior Vice President, Government Relations, Time Warner Cable
